

My husband's father recently died. The day of the funeral we returned back home to a ringing phone when I answered it, it was a telemarketer. I nicely told her please do not call my home and to take my name and number off of their mailing list. Furthermore, I went on to tell her I am on the "National Do Not Call List". She began to tell me, there's no such thing as a Do Not Call List and I would have to call this 900 number to get my number taken off their mailing list.

So, I would have to pay the 900 toll charge to have my name and number taken off a list, I never even applied too.

YES! Please Mr. Governor & Associates please stop this annoying solicitation.

I received several calls from the same company and others, because I never called the 900 number to remove my name.

Please Help!
